Boost for Beijing - Tianjin Sandstorm Control Program

As spring draws near, Beijingers' thoughts are turning to the annual onslaught of March sandstorms on their city — ordeals which see many tons of sand and grit dumped on large areas and which get into buildings and clog people's hair, eyes and nostrils. Last year saw one two-day storm dump more than 30 tons of choking sand/grit on local streets before high winds carried it east to South Korea.

Meanwhile, in efforts to reduce the effects of the storms, the Chinese government is reinforcing the Beijing—Tianjin sandstorm source-control program with new policies to boost the efficacy of current tree-planting and ‘greening’ measures. The program covers 75 counties in Hebei and Shanxi provinces, the Inner Mongolia Autonomous region and Beijing and Tianjin municipalities — a total area of 458,000 square kilometers. Over the next 10 years, 205,000 square kilometers of desert and soil-eroded land will be grassed.

To date, a total of 2.28 million hectares of such land have been transformed and 1.4 million hectares of woods planted. Just over two million hectares of new grassland and forestry have emerged in the regions covered by the program, resulting in a gradual improvement in overall ecological conditions.

Despite this, it has become harder for the program to be carried out. To reduce or negate sandstorms in the capital as soon as possible, it is imperative to readjust current policies for desertification control and afforestation under the present program. Thus new policies will include permission for individuals to enjoy the same state subsidies for afforestation as official economic entities.

Passage 2

1. Dear Dr. Lucy: I have been happily married for nine years and have three children. My problem is my mother-in-law. She complains about everything. She says mean things to me while I just hang my head and try to be respectful because she is old. My husband is quiet and easy-going and he tells me I should ignore her. I feel so angry and humiliated. What should I do?

Signed: Frustrated

2. Dear Frustrated: This is the classic situation in which your kindness has brought you problems. Be firm. Tell her that you do not appreciate her complaints about you and that you would appreciate her being nice to you since you have great respect for her.

Signed: Dr. Lucy

3. Dear Dr. Lucy: The teacher called me and told me my son has been bullying younger children at school. He seems such a quiet boy but has never had many close friends. I find it hard to believe that he would behave that way. Maybe it's his size. He is eight years old and is taller than the other children and weighs 40 kilos.

Signed: Mother's Tears

4. Dear Mother's Tears: You could make sure he is not sitting around watching television at home, but is out playing sports or walking. Be sure to spend some time with him. He needs attention.

Signed: Dr. Lucy

5. Dear Dr. Lucy: My neighbor is a middle-aged widow who lives next door. She spends hours in our house every day and frequently interferes in how we take care of our children. She is always giving them sweets and ice cream. When we scold our children, she tells them we're only joking.

Signed: Unwilling Hostess

6. Dear Unwilling: You are the victim of your own hospitality. Tell this woman you are busy next time she knocks at the door. Don't let her in! She's no friend. Get her out of your life. She shouldn't visit more than once a month and then without candy and ice cream.

Signed: Dr. Lucy

7. Dear Dr. Lucy: My husband is having an affair with my neighbor. It's getting worse and worse. Last night they were seen by everyone in our area having tea and kissing in a nearby park. I am totally sad because my husband is so openly in love with this woman. Please tell me what to do. Signed: Sad wife at home

8. Dear Sad: Tell your husband to pack his bags and leave. No husband is better than a cheating one. He is making a fool of you. Divorce him.

Signed: Dr. Lucy

Part 3: Questions (39 – 48) are based on passage 3. 20 points

Passage 3

I was married for almost six years ... happily married for the first two years. Jody and I were classmates at high school and were attracted to each other from the time we first met at the age of twelve or thirteen. We always hung out together and started dating seriously when we were only fifteen. I was so excited the first time I asked her out! After that, we spent every spare moment together.

Everyone ... our parents, teachers, friends and so on ... predicted that we'd break up one day. We were determined to prove them wrong and were engaged when we were nineteen. The evening I proposed was like something from a romantic novel. I chose my moment and asked the magic question: "Jody, darling, will you marry me?" her answer was a few tears of happiness. It seems crazy when I look back on it! Again, everyone was expecting us to break off the engagement, but we never even considered that.

A year later, we had a typical, big wedding ceremony and Jody really did look the perfect, beautiful bride in her white gown. We had a great time in Lake Tahoe for our honeymoon and came back and settled down to married life. Jessica, our daughter, was born, according to plan, two years after we were married and that was when our problems began.

We were both delighted to be parents, but somehow we just grew further and further apart from each other. We were arguing the whole time and were both very miserable. Eventually, after four years, we separated and then, divorced. I still see Jessica regularly. I can't say I enjoy living alone, but I haven't yet found another partner. Jody is dating a guy who lives in the same apartment house as her but I don't think their relationship is really serious. I'm really sad about our divorce, but I guess everyone was right; we were too young when we started going together and, the truth is, we were never really compatible.

Questions 39–43. Guided Summary: Fill the blanks with one to two words from Passage 3 to complete the summary.

Cliff is telling us his marriage with Jody. They were 39 at high school, and 40 to each other. Although all the people around them predicted they would 41 one day, they got engaged and 42, after their daughter was born, they often argued and grew further and further apart. Finally, they separated and 43.

Questions 44–48. True or False: Mark the following statements as T (true) or F (false) on your answer sheet.

44. In the text, relationship indicates that a man and woman are more than just friends.
45. They've been married for 6 years.
46. They had a small church wedding.
47. They settled in Lake Toho for married life.
48. They failed in their marriage because they were too young when they got married.

- This test will take 30 minutes.
- Write your essay on the Answer Sheet.
- Your essay should be about 150 words.
